All about the location

Camp de Mar is an exclusive, intimate coastal village in the municipality of Andratx in southwestern Mallorca, with only about 300 permanent residents, giving it a quiet and private atmosphere. Originally a small fishing and coastal community, Camp de Mar did not develop into a high-end vacation and residential destination until the second half of the 20th century, with the focus always on low-density development and integration into the natural surroundings. Today, the town is synonymous with relaxed luxury, well-maintained residential complexes, and one of the region's most beautiful, fine-sand coves—known for its clear waters and the iconic wooden pier restaurant that extends directly into the sea. Its location between the Tramuntana Mountains and the Mediterranean Sea makes Camp de Mar particularly attractive: quiet, green, and yet exceptionally well-connected. Palma de Mallorca is about 25 kilometers away, and Son Sant Joan International Airport is approximately 35 kilometers away. International schools are primarily located in the neighboring municipalities of Calvià and Palma and are easily accessible by car in about 20 to 30 minutes, which also makes Camp de Mar an attractive option for families. The area offers a wide range of sports activities, ranging from water sports such as swimming, stand-up paddleboarding, and scuba diving to hiking, cycling, and golf—the renowned Golf de Andratx course is located right in the town and is considered one of the most challenging on the island. Camp de Mar thus combines tranquility in a natural setting, a high quality of life, and a privileged location in southwestern Mallorca—ideal for discerning buyers who value discretion, ocean views, and proximity to Palma.
