Built around 1850 for Michalis Kampanis, a former mayor of Mykonos, Kampani is one of the last historic captain's houses still standing directly on the water's edge of the old harbor, the most iconic, most walked stretch of Mykonos Town. West-facing across the port toward the open Aegean, the villa delivers an uninterrupted 270° panorama: fishing caiques and yachts at your feet, the whitewashed geometry of the Town around you, and a full sunset over the water every single evening.

This is not a property near the old port. It sits on it; a position that is effectively impossible to obtain today, on a stretch of waterfront that is historic, protected, and almost never sold.

Built with traditional thick Mykonian stone walls and exposed wooden beam ceilings, the villa was fully renovated in 2018, blending a boho-chic aesthetic with original architectural bones, refurbished period furniture, and modern soundproof double glazing throughout; genuine heritage, not pastiche. At a glance: 200 sqm interior · 4 bedrooms, 3 bathrooms · sleeps up to 12 · private sea-view terraces and balconies · indoor and outdoor dining · fully turnkey.

Kampani already operates as a licensed, established luxury rental (GNT0 seal, proven Booking.com/Airbnb track record) with a full concierge infrastructure in place; 24/7 villa manager, daily housekeeping, private chef, transfers and chauffeur, in-house spa, yacht charter arrangements. A buyer acquires a functioning five-star asset with a revenue history from day one, freely convertible to private family use.

Mykonos remains one of the most resilient trophy real estate markets in the Mediterranean. Decades of A-list and ultra-high-net-worth demand, a hard physical limit on new waterfront and old-town construction, and a global airport that connects directly to major European and Middle Eastern hubs have kept prime Chora property in a state of structural undersupply. Unlike newer resort markets, Mykonos combines genuine architectural heritage with a global brand — the island doesn't need to be built up to attract capital, it already is the destination. For a high-net-worth buyer, that translates into three things few other European markets can offer together: consistent capital appreciation on scarce old-town waterfront stock, strong and provable short-let yields during an eight-month season, and a lifestyle asset with instant international prestige. A historic, sea-front mansion on the old port isn't simply real estate in Mykonos — it's one of a small, closed set of addresses the market cannot replicate.
